

METADATA REVIEWS

No. 1 (first issue): May 2021

New journal launching address

This journal advocates "a place for discussion and information exchange about catalogs, classifications, indexes, and metadata that mediate between authors and readers," and is a "general-interest journal" that covers a wide range of information resource organization (catalogs, classifications, indexes, metadata, etc.), not only in the library field but also in related institutions (archives, museums, art galleries, etc.), publishers, bookstores, and digital archives.

The core of the journal is library and information science, but contributions from not only information science (documentation) but also bibliography, history, philosophy, pedagogy, linguistics, literature, sociology, law, and economics are welcome.

The journal accepts submissions in any format, such as articles, essays, research notes (papers in undecided manuscripts), research reports, case studies, proposals, essays, news, library introductions, book reviews, new book introductions, material introductions, trivia articles, bibliographies (manuscripts), and translations (please see the submission guidelines).
